Building a NEW Field of Study
Between 130-150 million individuals of direct African descent currently live across Latin America. Over 95 percent of the Africans forcibly imported into the Americas went to Latin America and the Caribbean, two-thirds of them to the Spanish and Portuguese colonies. Many Hispanics in the United States are also of African descent.

Cultural forms and community practices associated with Africa are conspicuous across the region - indeed, the very existence of Latin America would be unthinkable without them. During the last few decades, Afro-Latin Americans have created numerous civic, cultural, and community organizations to demand recognition, equality and resources, prompting legislative action and the implementation of compensatory policies. The Afro-Latin American Research Institute stimulates and sponsors scholarship on the Afro-Latin American experience and provides a forum where scholars, intellectuals, activists and policy makers engage in exchanges and debates. Our main mission is to develop the new field of Afro-Latin American Studies.

ALARI is the first research institution in the United States devoted to the history and culture of peoples of African descent in Latin America and the Caribbean.

Afro-Latin American Studies partners with knowledge producers who come from academia, activism, culture and the arts, policy makers and representatives of international organizations. We seek to highlight the richness and diversity of Latin America through the contributions, histories, and cultures of its populations of African descent.

Our goal is to raise a $10 Million Endowment to sustain this work in perpetuity.
American museums are rewriting the history of 20th-century art to include black artists...

In 2015, the New York Times published an excellent article, “Black artists and the march into the Museum,” about this problem. The article highlighted the transformative impact of paying attention to black artists.” After decades of spotty acquisitions, undernourished scholarship and token exhibitions, American museums are rewriting the history of 20th-century art to include black artists in a more visible and meaningful way than ever before, playing historical catch-up at full tilt, followed by collectors who are rushing to find the most significant works before they are out of reach.”We anticipate that something similar will happen in Latin America and we are leading the way in this field. Funding priorities include an Annual Workshop on Afro-Latin American Art, where a collaborative group of international scholars produce new exhibits and publications. The first exhibit on “Afro-Latin American Art” will take place at the Museum of the Americas (Washington, DC, 2020) using their rich collections, but we plan to host triennial art exhibits on Afro-Latin American Art at Harvard’s Cooper Gallery of African and African American Art.

AFRO-LATIN AMERICAN ART: BUILDING A NEW CANON

ALARI is helping constitute a new visual archive, a new field of study, a new approach to collecting, by promoting serious study of the artistic production of afriduals and of representations of blacks since colonial times in Latin America. This field has enormous transformative potential, as many cultural products and creations of perceived European origin—from altars to cathedrals—were in fact manufactured and built by African workers. This body of artistic work has been systematically ignored and remains heavily understudied.

FUNDING OPPORTUNITIES INCLUDE:
- Bi-Annual Workshop on Afro-Latin American Art: $100K, $30K Expendable
- Seed grants for archaeological and public history projects: $50K, $20K Expendable
- Publication Fund: $50

AFRO-LATIN AMERICAN ARCHAEOLOGY: FINDING THE AFRICAN PRESENCE IN LATIN AMERICA

Africans left numerous material traces in the urban and rural landscapes (plantations, haciendas, runaway slave communities) of Latin America. Closely intertwined with our project in Afro-Latin American Art, the ALARI has been promoting the new field of Afro-Latin American Archaeology, which opens new windows into the lives and material cultures of Africans and their descendants in the region. Through this field, we participate in regional debates concerning how to memorialize slavery and the slave trade through public history projects.

FUNDING OPPORTUNITIES INCLUDE:
- Biannual Workshop on Afro-Latin American Archaeology: $60K, $30K Expendable
- Seed grants for archaeological and public history projects: $50K, $20K Expendable
- Publication Fund: $50

AFRO-LATIN AMERICA ON STEAM: EDUCATION FOR INNOVATION

Afro-Latin America on STEAM (Science, Technology, Engineering, Art, Math) is an ALARI initiative to develop 21st century skills in Afro-Latin American communities in Latin America, led by ALARI-affiliated faculty Doris Sommer. This is a teachers-training program based on Pre-Texts, a simple pedagogical protocol for dealing with difficult texts, including scientific texts, by using them as raw material for making art in any genre participants choose. The project launched in 2017 in collaboration with Colombian Ministry of Environment and the Secretary of Education in Quibdó (Chocó), to train 20 teachers at the Escuela Normal Superior of Quibdó. The teachers then apply this interactive methodology in their own classes.

FUNDING OPPORTUNITIES INCLUDE:
- Two Annual Pre-Text Workshops in Afrodescendant communities: $250K, $10K annually
- This program could be named, as appropriate

PUBLICATIONS

ALARI is currently involved in two publication efforts. In collaboration with Cambridge University Press, in 2017 we launched the book series, Afro-Latin America, edited by George Reid Andrews (University of Pittsburgh) and Alejandro de la Fuente (Harvard University). The series showcases scholarship produced by different disciplines, including history, political science, sociology, ethnography, anthropology, religious studies, art, law, and cultural studies. It covers the full temporal span of the African Diaspora in Latin America, from the early colonial period to the present. We also produce the ALARI Report on Race and Public Policy in Latin America, which compiles difficult to access information on government and civil society initiatives concerning public policy for racial inclusion and equality in Latin America.

FUNDING OPPORTUNITIES INCLUDE:
- Publication subsidy (art and archaeology): $250K, $50K annually
- Publication subsidy (translations from Spanish or Portuguese): $250K, $50K annually
- ALARI Report on Race and Public Policy in Latin America: $1.25M, $50K annually

Publication of articles, reports, and other scholarly writings is also a priority. We support both our own researchers and external authors. In 2017 we hosted a conference at the Harvard Branner-Willard House on Afro-Latin American Archaeology: Finding the African Presence in Latin America. This program could be named, as appropriate.
Student Dissertation Workshop

ALARI hosts an annual Doctoral Dissertation Workshop open to students from all over the world. An average of 14 participants are selected from a competitive pool of nearly 100 global graduate students. This two-day meeting at Harvard forges networks among promising junior scholars and energizes this groundbreaking new field. The Mark Claster Mamolen endowed gift fund was created to support a portion of this workshop, but the demand is far greater than the support we have to offer.

FUNDING OPPORTUNITIES INCLUDE:
- Travel grants for students: $40K funds 20 students
- Program and planning support: $200K Endowed, $25K expendable

Continental Conference on Afro-Latin American Studies

This biannual conference provides a unique forum for scholars, students, activists, artists, policymakers and government officials to come together to present their research work or to highlight their programs and initiatives. The first such conference will take place at Harvard in December 2019.

FUNDING OPPORTUNITIES INCLUDE:
- Endowed Conference: $1M Endowed, $50K expendable
- Conference Sponsorships: $10K-$20K
- Travel Support for participants: $20K supports 10 participants

On Line Specialization in Afro-Latin American Studies

ALARI is launching a Specialization in Afro-Latin American Studies in collaboration with the Latin American Council of Social Sciences (CLACSO). These online courses are open to students, government officials, activists, teachers, and general public all over Latin America. Classes are in Spanish and Portuguese and students who finish the Specialization (one central course, two elective seminars, one research paper) receive a certificate from CLACSO and ALARI. Participating faculty come from leading universities in the US, Europe, and Latin America. Eventually we aspire to convene an annual face-to-face meeting between faculty and the best students in the Specialization.

FUNDING OPPORTUNITIES INCLUDE:
- Annual meeting faculty-students: $1.0M Endowed, $50K expendable
- Student support: $100K Supports 250 students in 3 years.
- Student Short-Term Research Grants: $50K Endowed, $25K expendable
- Student Dissertation Research Fellowships: $1.5M, $75K expendable
- Student Dissertation Writing Fellowships: $1.5M, $75K expendable
- Annual meeting faculty-students: $1.0M Endowed, $50K annually
- Postdoctoral Junior Fellow: $1.5M, $75K annually
- Visiting Non-academic Fellow: $1.5M, $75K annually
- Student financial support: $20K supports 10 participants

Graduate Student Dissertation and Short-Term Research Grants:

During the last three years, the ALARI has been providing research support to students at Harvard University working on Afro-Latin American Studies projects for short-term field research and for semester-long fellowships.

FUNDING OPPORTUNITIES INCLUDE:
- Graduate Student Dissertation Fellowships: $1.5M, $75K annually
- Graduate Student Short-Term Research Grants: $500K Endowed, $25K expendable
- Student Dissertation Writing Fellowships: $1.5M, $75K expendable

Visiting Fellows in Afro-Latin American Studies

ALARI plans to host two to three visiting fellows annually. Fellows are typically at different stages in their careers and come from a variety of backgrounds in academia, art, activism, and policymaking. These fellows build new networks in a high quality, interdisciplinary environment. The program promotes new approaches in research and pedagogy. Funding a Fellow includes housing, stipend and travel costs.

FUNDING OPPORTUNITIES INCLUDE:
- Pre-Doctoral Visiting Fellow: $1.0M, $50K annually
- Postdoctoral Junior Fellow: $1.5M, $75K annually
- Visiting Non-academic Fellow: $1.5M, $75K annually

“I would like to express my gratitude to the Afro-Latin American Research Institute for this initiative [the Mamolen Dissertation Workshop], for inviting black and quilombola women, “intellectuals in formation,” to this prestigious academic space, for causing “internal resolutions” that transcend me, because other quilombolas around me are now motivated to share their stories.”

“My academic year at the Afro-Latin American Research Institute was one of the best intellectual experiences I’ve had…a possibility to build new networks and to learn about new approaches and perspectives.”
